

Sheerhabitat, founded by Andriana Cassimatis in 2000, integrates her abstracted, magnified images of nature with sheer fabrics to create contemporary interior panels for living and working environments. The inspiration comes from a desire to merge the colors, shapes and beauty of the natural world with materials that have a textured or sheer quality, allowing light to filter through. Please refer to www.sheerhabitat.com for more information regarding Sheerhabitat Panels.

Available Materials for Sheer-Suspension

— = Nylon Wire

The Sheer-Suspension System offers an easy way to maximize the use and beauty of a Sheerhabitat fabric panel.

This highly transparent combination of aluminum rod, clear nylon thread and adjustable hardware allow the panels to be displayed with clean lines and a solid construction.

The adjustable hardware connects to the ceiling, allowing the panels to function as room dividers, window treatments or decorative wall hangings.

Georgette - fabric with a soft to medium hand and a slight pebble grain. Semi-transparent with a front or back lightsource.

Voile - fabric with a soft to medium hand and a basic weave. Very transparent with a front or back lightsource.

Sheer-Adhere Panels offer a simple way to attach a fabric to walls, glass, cement and stone.

A clear, plastic adhesive strip is applied directly to both a sturdy, textured, paper-like fabric and to the desired surface allowing the panel great design versatility.

Whether applying the fabric to the wall as a "glue less" wallpaper or placing it in front of a window as a stationary shade, Sheer-Adhere Panels offer a non-invasive, portable application.

Remay - Fabric with a paper-like, textured hand. Semi-transparent with a front and back lightsource. This fabric can be cut with scissors without the edges fraying.
